

positioned inside a socket housing to form a socket connector. This connector is constructed so that this socket connector and another plug connector of similar construction are engaged and locked to each other by means of a locking part. The locking part is disposed in a location that is separated from the shielding shell.

In the Claims:

Delete claims 1-5.